ABSTRACT

The document provides listings of 320 periodicals related to disability issues. Arranged alphabetically by title, citations include information for organization/publisher, address, other publications which index the listed publication, frequency, holdings, general information (style or content overview), and broad subject areas addressed. A subject index arranges the periodicals according to such topics as vocational rehabilitation, sensory aids, research, occupational therapy, libraries, legislation, health care, computers, and advocacy. A title list and a publisher index are also provided, as is a list of databases and printed indexes which regularly index some rehabilitation-related periodicals. (CL)

PREFACE

NARIC is a rehabilitation information center and research library funded by the National Institute of Handicapped Research, U.S. Department of Education. NARIC offers its users a wide variety of services based on the unique collection it has developed. Of special note are the over 300 documents included as part of NARIC's periodical collection. These publications -- ranging from peer reviewed professional journals to consumer-oriented newsletters -- offer a glimpse into the diverse subjects of concern to individuals involved in disability issues.

Compiling the information for inclusion in The Periodical List was first accomplished by NARIC in response to an internal need to effectively retrieve the periodical information. It became clear however that there was a broader applicability to these materials; indeed, that the disability related field needed an extensive guide to its published literature. Thus, in 1984, D:ATA Institute, an organization committed to fostering the dissemination and efficient management of disability related information, decided, in cooperation with NARIC, to publish The Periodical List: A Guide to Disability Related Journals and Newsletters.

D:ATA Institute and NARIC believe that this document is responsive to the needs of the large community of individuals interested in disability issues. As a comprehensive guide, The Periodical List provides users access to the wide range of information available on the subject of disability. This issue of The Periodical List is primarily reflective of NARIC's collection and can enable users to draw a quick picture of NARIC's resource base. However, the parameters of the list will grow over time, so if you do not find a particular periodical listed and you think it ought to be -- you are invited to send a copy of the document to D:ATA Institute.

Over the next few months we hope your copy of The Periodical List will become worn and dog-eared by use. As is clear, we subscribe to many periodicals and to one important theory: Information is power. Power to more thoroughly search for answers to problems. Power to stay current with professional trends and developments. And most critically, power to provide more effective service to and for disabled persons. We welcome your comments or ideas as to how this list could be made even more useful to you.

USERS' GUIDE

Each publication in The Periodical List is identified by a number that places the document in its numerical sequence. It is this identifying number that is used in the indexes to show where you should look to find specific information. These identification numbers are not page numbers.

This list is divided into five sections:

Title List: An alphabetical listing of periodical titles and the corresponding identification number.

Periodical List: Eight categories of information about each periodical.

Subject Index: Periodical title and identification number listed by subject area.

Publisher's Index: Periodical title and identification number listed by publisher or organizational affiliation.

Appendix: Abbreviations used and addresses for the organizations who index and abstract the listed periodicals.

Description of the Content

The Periodical List section is composed of eight categories.

TITLE:	Correct, current title of the periodical.
ORGANIZATION/ PUBLISHER:	Name of publisher or organizational affiliation.
ADDRESS:	Address for subscription information. A * indicates that the address changes with the election of new officers.
INDEXED:	Identifies where portions of the periodical may be indexed and is only included if it is an indexed publication.
FREQUENCY:	How often the periodical is published.
HOLDINGS:	Extent of NARIC's collection; C indicates copyright.
GENERAL INFORMATION:	A brief style or content overview.
SUBJECTS:	Broad subject areas included in the periodical.

Example

Assume you are researching the broad topic of counseling disabled persons and you want to know all the periodicals produced by the American Psychological Association (APA) containing disability related information.

1. Turn to the Publisher's Index and find the alphabetical listing for the AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

2. Under the organization's name you will find nine periodicals published by the APA and relevant to disability issues.

Now, let's say you want some details about each of these publications. You just use the identification number to locate where each publication appears within the body of the periodical list.

1. From the Publisher's Index, you decide that you want details about the Rehabilitation Psychology listing.

2. Locate the corresponding identification number -- 268.

3. Turn to the Periodical List section keeping in mind you are looking for identification number 268 not page number 268.

4. Identification number 268 is Rehabilitation Psychology. You can now use the data included under this listing to discover specific information about this publication. The content also gives you information necessary to locate the document.
